

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON COOPERATIVE
CONSERVATION

SAINT LOUIS • AUGUST 29, 30, & 31, 2005

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

President George W. Bush

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

August 11, 2005

I send greetings to those gathered for the 2005 White House Conference on Cooperative Conservation in Saint Louis, Missouri.

Americans are blessed by our country's expansive landscapes, diverse wildlife, and beautiful public lands. We have made remarkable progress over the years in protecting our environment through good stewardship. To ensure that our national treasures remain a source of pride for all Americans, my Administration is committed to achieving a cleaner, safer, and healthier environment for future generations.

I appreciate conference participants and all those who contribute to conservation efforts in their communities. By working together, the Federal Government, States, tribes, local communities, businesses, and concerned citizens like you can help protect our public lands and conserve our environment. Your commitment to excellence and dedication is making a real difference and reflects the spirit of our Nation.

Laura and I send our best wishes for a successful conference.

Strengthening shared governance and citizen stewardship

Welcome to the White House Conference on Cooperative Conservation: Strengthening Shared Governance and Citizen Stewardship

The Council on Environmental Quality, the Department of the Interior, Department of Agriculture, Department of Commerce, Department of Defense and the Environmental Protection Agency are honored to host the White House Conference on Cooperative Conservation. Over the last year, our staffs have worked together to carry out the directives of the Executive Order on Facilitation of Cooperative Conservation. In preparing for this conference, a significant step in implementing the Executive Order, we have strengthened our relationships and forged new connections. This early sense of collaboration encourages all that the future of cooperative conservation is bright and promising.

Over the next three days, you will hear remarkable stories of collaboration from groups and individuals who have used innovative approaches to conservation. You may also share your experiences and ideas on how to energize all citizens across organizational and geographic boundaries in support of conserving our natural resources now, and for future generations. Leaders from all of the sectors that make up America will suggest ways to make cooperation, local leadership, voluntary commitment, and private ownership the hallmarks of conservation of the 21st century and beyond. Thank you for your participation this week and for your ongoing support of cooperative conservation. Welcome to St. Louis!

James L. Connaughton, Council on Environmental Quality

The Council on Environmental Quality coordinates federal environmental efforts and works closely with the Cabinet agencies and White House offices in the development of environmental policies and initiatives. The Council on Environmental Quality reports to the President on the state of the environment and oversees federal agency implementation of the environmental impact assessment process.

Gale A. Norton, Department of the Interior

Interior and its bureaus manage federal lands by working with adjacent landowners, states, tribes, and communities with the goal to empower federal land managers to form partnerships with local communities to better care for the land and natural and cultural resources. By promoting partnerships, Interior leverages federal conservation dollars with non-federal funds and utilizes the ingenuity and knowledge of local individuals, strengthening on-the-ground results to benefit long-term conservation.

Donald Rumsfeld, Department of Defense

Department of Defense conservation efforts focus on preserving valuable land, sea, and air assets to help sustain military readiness for current and future operations while conserving natural resources for current and future generations.

Michael Johanns, Department of Agriculture

USDA is the "people's Department" as noted by President Abraham Lincoln when he founded the Agency in 1862. The Department of Agriculture serves as a steward of our nation's 193 million acres of national forests and rangelands and encourages voluntary efforts to protect soil, water, and wildlife on the 70 percent of America's lands that are in private hands.

Carlos M. Gutierrez, Department of Commerce

Commerce gathers data to measure economic health and vitality, promotes U.S. exports, enforces international trade agreements, regulates sensitive goods and technologies export, issues patents and trademarks, protects intellectual property, forecasts weather, conducts oceanic and atmospheric research, provides living marine resources stewardship, develops and applies technology, measurements and standards, telecommunications and technology policy, and fosters minority business and economic growth.

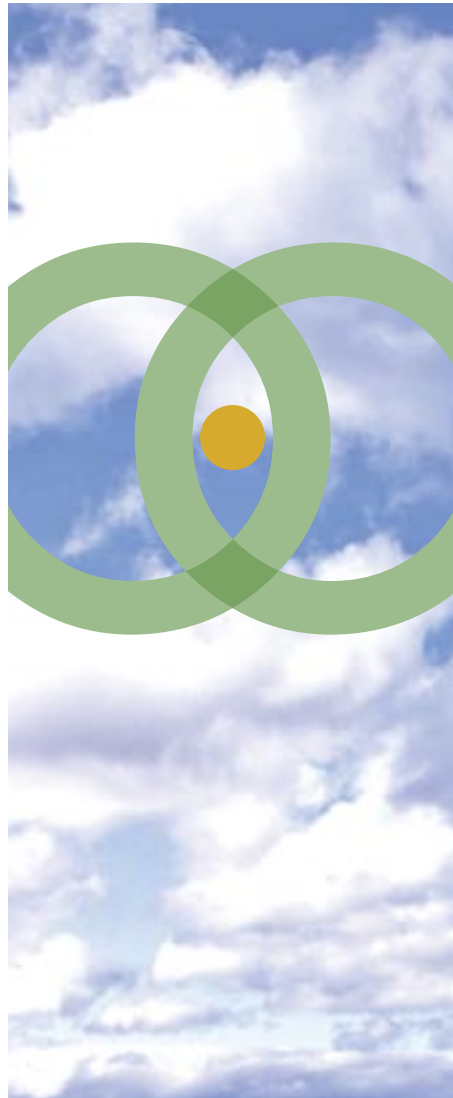

Stephen L. Johnson, Environmental Protection Agency

The mission of the Environmental Protection Agency is to protect human health and the environment. Since 1970, the Environmental Protection Agency has been working for a cleaner, healthier environment for the American people by implementing and enforcing the nation's federal environmental laws and regulations.

The White House Conference on Cooperative Conservation: Strengthening Shared Governance and Citizen Stewardship is hosted by these federal organizations.

SESSION INFORMATION

Monday, August 29 conference concurrent sessions will focus on 30 case study presentations of successful cooperative conservation projects. On Tuesday, August 30, each conference participant will take part in facilitated discussions of compelling cooperative conservation topics. The outcome of these conversations will be shared with all conference participants on Wednesday, August 31. (See Conference At A Glance, pages 3-7.)

If you used the on-line itinerary planner, your conference packet includes a personalized schedule of your session selections. Sessions listed as "full" have reached their capacity through pre-registration.

Jim Talent

Senator Jim Talent

Senator Talent has served the people of Missouri for nearly 20 years in the Missouri Legislature, the U.S. House, and now in the U.S. Senate. As a member of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and co-chair of the Bio-fuels Caucus, Senator Talent pushed for a pro-growth, pro-jobs Energy Bill for Missouri and a Renewable Fuels Standard for our nation's energy security. As a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Senator Talent has achieved a great deal on behalf of Missouri's farmers, ranchers and the state's agricultural sector.

James L. Connaughton

James L. Connaughton, Chairman, Council on Environmental Quality

James L. Connaughton was unanimously confirmed by the United States Senate and appointed by President Bush on June 18, 2001, to serve as Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ), in the Executive Office of the President. He serves as the senior environmental and natural resources advisor to the President as well as Director of the Office of Environmental Policy. Mr. Connaughton oversees the development of environmental policy, coordinates inter-agency implementation of environmental programs, and mediates key policy discussions among federal agencies, states, tribal and local governments, and private citizens.

Gale A. Norton

Gale A. Norton, Secretary of the Interior

Gale Norton, a lifelong conservationist, public servant and advocate for bringing common sense solutions to environmental policy, was sworn in as the 48th Secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior in January 2001. The first woman to head the 154-year old department, Norton has made what she calls the Four Cs the cornerstone of her tenure: Communication, Consultation, and Cooperation, all in the service of Conservation. At the heart of the Four Cs is the belief that for conservation to be successful, the government must involve the people who live and work on the land.

Unfortunately, this publication went to press before all conference contributors could be named. So to those not mentioned by name, please accept the gratitude of all associated with the White House Conference on Cooperative Conservation. Special appreciation also goes to the agencies and organizations that have sponsored events throughout the conference.

POST CONFERENCE RESOURCES

To facilitate moving forward from the conference towards future efforts, and to share the conference experience with those who could not attend, information is posted at www.conserva.ion.ceq.gov.

This rich collection of material includes: session summaries, distributed materials, plenary addresses, daily newsletters and much more. Conference proceedings highlighting outcomes and ideas to move forward with cooperative conservation will also be prepared and made available in the very near future.

NEW LEAF PAPER
ENVIRONMENTAL BENEFITS STATEMENT

This program is printed on New Leaf Primavera Gloss, made with 80% recycled fiber, 40% post-consumer waste, processed chlorine free. By using this environmental paper, the White House Conference on Cooperative Conservation saved the following resources:

trees	water	energy	solid waste	greenhouse gases
3 fully grown	2,093 gallons	2 million BTUs	168 pounds	437 pounds

Calculated based on research done by Environmental Defense and other members of the Paper Task Force.
